Research interests

- Time-domain stellar astrophysics; optical transients; supernovae: interacting, core-collapse, thermonuclear; Gap Transients: supernova impostors, stellar mergers, electron-capture supernovae candidates.
- Electromagnetic domains: Near-Ultraviolet (NUV), Optical, Near-Infrared (NIR), Mid-Infrared (MIR).

Education

04/2019 – Ph.D. in Astrophysics, Universidad Andres Bello (UNAB), Santiago, Chile, Supervisor: Dr. G. Pignata
06/2023 (UNAB), Co-supervisor: Dr. A. Pastorello (INAF-OAPd).

Thesis title: Exploring the final stages of massive stars through Type II<sup>n</sup> Supernova precursors and LBV variability
In my PhD thesis I searched for precursor activity years before the explosion of a sample of 27 nearby Type II<sup>n</sup> SNe. Then, I reconstructed decades-long light curves of a sample of 12 eruptive Luminous Blue Variables in the Local Group, looking for their eruptions. Finally, I compared the light curves of the precursors to those of the LBVs, to see if they are similar and therefore if LBVs are indeed good candidates as progenitors of SNe II<sup>n</sup>. While the characteristics of the precursors and the LBV eruptions are different, I still found a few similarities, making the connection possible.

10/2016 – M.Sc. in Astronomy, Padova University, Padova, Italy, Advisors: Dr. S. Ciroi and Dr. A. Pastorello,
09/2018 final remark - 110/110 cum Laude.

Thesis title: The peculiar SN 2013gc: evidences of an eruptive phase before the explosion
In this thesis I analysed the interactive Type II<sup>n</sup> SN 2013gc, its light curves and spectra. By looking at archival images taken a few years before the explosion, I found evidences of an eruptive phases from the progenitor, during which it expelled circumstellar material, with which the SN ejecta interacted after the explosion.

10/2013 – B.Sc. in Astronomy, Padova University, Padova, Italy, Advisors: Dr. S. Ciroi and Dr. M. Berton,
10/2016 final remark - 101/110.

Thesis title: Determinazione della massa del buco nero in un campione di FSRQ a redshift intermedio
In this thesis I studied a small sample of 9 flat-spectrum radio quasars at intermediate redshift, analysed their spectra from the SDSS survey and from them I calculated the masses of the supermassive black holes at their centres.
